

Photo by Lance Twitchell

HAA LATSEEN COMMUNITY PROJECT

February through May 2018 in Juneau

Sealaska Heritage invites emerging Northwest Coast artists to participate in the 2018 Haa Latseen Community Project in Juneau.

The project includes the following components:

- Carving practice hosted by Donald Gregory (most Saturdays now-May 19)
- Business class for Alaska Native artists with Saunders McNeill (March 5 & 6)
- Formline workshop with David R. Boxley (March 11-18)
- Frontlet carving with Ray Watkins (April 23-May 5 & May 12)

Artists age 18 and over are welcome to apply to attend one or more of these components. However, we encourage applicants to attend all components to gain the program's full benefits.

REGISTRATION LINKS:

For 2 or more components:	Haa Latseen project	goo.gl/oQHvDt	by Feb. 23
For 1 component:	Saturday carving practice	goo.gl/QGLkzE	apply ASAP
	Business class	goo.gl/kvJPDz	by Feb. 23
	Formline workshop	goo.gl/16cv9z	by March 2
	Frontlet carving	goo.gl/pjnjEg	by April 16

Questions? Contact Natasha Phillips at (907) 586-9167 or natasha.phillips@sealaska.com

Haa Latseen Community Project is a Sealaska Heritage program, funded in part by the National Endowment for the Arts, the Alaska State Council on the Arts, and the Juneau Arts & Humanities Council, in partnership with Tlingit-Haida Regional Housing Authority and Lemon Creek Correctional Center, with additional support from the Haa Aani Carving Program, the Juneau Re-entry Coalition, and the City and Borough of Juneau. The formline workshop is funded by the U.S. Dept. of Education, Alaska Native Education Program. Contents of this project do not necessarily represent the policy of DOE, and you should not assume endorsement by the Federal Government.