Names on the Land

Felipe Vasquez

MONDAY,
JUNE 29th, 2015, 12-1 pm

Sealaska Heritage - Living History Center in the Walter Soboleff Building

FREE & OPEN TO THE PUBLIC

Join us for a free lecture by Felipe Vasquez, a graduate student at the University of Kent and visiting scholar, who will present his ethnobotanical study of toponyms—place names derived from topographical features in the region. In his research proposal, Vasquez argues that traditional ecological knowledge is seen as both cultural heritage to be treasured and practical site-specific knowledge that could help humans adapt to climate change.
